Morgan Stanley vs. Goldman Sachs

The two biggest names in investment banking.

	Morgan Stanley	Goldman Sachs
Founded	1935, when a law forced J.P. Morgan to split off its trading arm	1869, by a German immigrant buying and selling IOUs out of a basement
Headquarters	1585 Broadway, in Times Square	200 West Street, in downtown Manhattan
Who runs it	Ted Pick. Started there as an analyst in 1990 and worked his way to the top.	David Solomon. Came from another bank in 1999. Also a part-time DJ.
What the company is worth	About $343 billion	About $303 billion
Money brought in last year	$70.6 billion, the most in company history	$58.3 billion
Profit last year	$16.9 billion	$17.2 billion
How many people work there	About 85,500	About 47,400
Money made per employee	About $825,000. More people, less per head.	About $1.23 million. Half the staff, similar profit.
Money from deal-making	$7.6 billion helping companies merge, get bought, or go public	$9.3 billion doing the same thing
Who wins more big deals	Third in the world	First in the world, and has been for 23 years straight
Client money they look after	$9.3 trillion	About $3.5 trillion
Where the money really comes from	Managing rich people's money. Boring, steady, and it pays every year no matter what.	Advising on deals and trading. Bigger paydays, but it swings hard with the market.
Most famous deal ever	Took Facebook public in 2012. Raised $16 billion, the biggest tech listing anyone had ever done.	Took Ford public in 1956. Raised $657 million, the biggest ever at the time, and put Goldman on the map.
How they survived 2008	Nearly went under. Saved by a $9 billion emergency investment from Japan's Mitsubishi UFJ.	Took a $5 billion lifeline from Warren Buffett and came out looking stronger than everyone else.
What they are best at	Trading stocks and managing wealth	Advising companies on mergers and buyouts
How people see them	The polished advisor. Calmer culture, more of a wealth firm.	The killer. Most prestigious name in banking and the most intense.
Famous people who worked there	Vikram Pandit, who went on to run Citigroup, and Mary Meeker, the biggest tech analyst of the dot-com era	Rishi Sunak, UK prime minister. Mario Draghi, Italian prime minister. Steven Mnuchin, US Treasury Secretary.
Starting pay for a new analyst	Roughly the same at both. Around $110,000 to $125,000 base, near $200,000 all-in after bonus.	Same ballpark, with bonuses at the top end running slightly higher.
Odds of getting an internship	Does not publish the number, but the competition is just as brutal	Under 1% for three years running. About 2,500 spots from over 360,000 applications.
