S-Tier Cold Email Approaches

Three angles so good, they should be illegal. Use them to get replies from bankers who ignore everyone else.

CASE STUDY

1. The Case Study Angle

Lead with proof, not a pitch.

Show modeling work you've done in the past on companies in related industries. It doubles as a quick look at your technical ability, so the banker sees what you can do before you ask for anything.

It's one of the easiest ways to build initial trust, credibility, and authority without coming off like you're chasing an offer.

EVENT

2. The Event Angle

Borrow relevance from where they'll already be.

1. Find upcoming events your ICP is likely to attend in the next three to six months.
2. Scrape the speaker list or the attendee list.
3. Use the event as the relevance line in your first sentence.
4. Once that's set, get into what you have to say.

UNPAID WORK

3. The Unpaid Work Angle

Give value before you ask for anything.

Look for unpaid opportunities to help out and provide value up front. It's extremely easy to say yes to, it builds reciprocity with the person you're reaching out to, and it gives them a glimpse of the work you can actually do for them.

Schedule a Call Directly with Chase to Learn about 1-on-1 Mentorship: wallstalpha.com/apply